

El Doble de Largo

Contributed by neat0
Friday, 11 January 2008
Last Updated Tuesday, 15 December 2009

Doublecab meets Singlecab bed . This project idea was hatched up long ago by its previous owner. A singlecab which got hit from behind and flipped the truck ruining the cab and lightly damaged on the passenger corner. Then a crewcab was found that was pretty rusty in the rear and the 2 were then mated to make a longbed doublecab.

Since it was mated though, it sat idle for several years in a garage . Years pass and it was then passed onto its current owner who decided it was time to put this thing to use. As you can clearly see, there is a lot of missing metal. Over the next couple of months, I will be installing a buttload of KlasicFab metal and fabricating other areas.

Ive got my work cut out for me on this one.

This Truck will be getting the full treatment of being painted and detailed at another shop once the metalwork is finished. Should be an interesting hit once it is finished. It will also be used plenty by its owner for what it was meant to do, haul stuff around as well as people.

{hsjp gallery|ugm/doublesinglecab/images/}